John Page has practiced advocacy and dispute resolution for 28 years as both counsel and mediator. Over those years, Mr. Page has observed the changing environment in which companies and individuals demand timely and cost effective dispute resolution. Mr. Page's commitment to this client-centered objective makes him a practical and effective choice as your mediator. His areas of expertise include matters concerning:

- corporate and commercial disputes
- contracts
- oppression remedies
- shareholders' disputes
- directors' and officers' liability
- conflict resolution within institutions
- class actions
- insurance
- professional negligence
- personal injury
- sexual assault and abuse
- sexual harassment
- hospital/physician privileges
- departing employees

Mr. Page was lead negotiator in the successful resolution of complex multi-party disputes including representing the Ontario government in reaching a revenue sharing agreement with Ontario's First Nations regarding the proceeds from the operation of Casino Rama. He represented the federal, provincial, and territorial governments in negotiations with the Canadian Red Cross for the transition of the national blood program to Canadian Blood Services. Mr. Page also acted for two national churches in the resolution of claims by former students of Indian Residential Schools in the largest class action settlement in Canadian history.

Mr. Page is an Adjunct Professor of Law at Osgoode Hall Law School where he has taught Civil Procedure since 2001. He is the coauthor of Summary Judgment and has written and lectured in the areas of class actions, alternative dispute resolution, human rights, employment law, and institutional liability for sexual abuse. Mr. Page was called to the Bar of Ontario in 1980 and has been a partner with Cassels Brock and Blackwell LLP since 1986. As counsel, Mr. Page has appeared in the provincial Superior Courts, the Ontario Court of Appeal, the Supreme Court of Canada and several federal and provincial tribunals.
